Q&A WITH URGENT FURY

How did Urgent Fury get its start?

We have been doing tournaments since 2003. Urgent Fury was built around a PS2 game called SOCOM. It was a third person tactical shooter built around the SEALs. One of the first multiplayer games on Playstation.

How did you make that work back then?

SOCOM had a lobby system similar to the PC version of America's Army. We would set up private matches in servers, do the matches and record everything manually.

When did you start integrating streaming?

We starting streaming our tournaments with Starhawk on PS3 in 2013. We were one of the first 100 Partners on Twitch which was then JustinTV. We have been streaming AAPG from the beginning on PS4.

Tell us about your TacMap tournaments.

TacMap tournaments have a unique geographic map we create that ties to specific missions in game. Clans fight over territories and the match determines who won the territory. We have a map and a mode. For example in SOCOM we had Breach so you would have to breach into the base to attack. The final map would be last man standing. So the last man standing would get the HQ.
